EXPLANATORY NOTES

This bill amends various provisions of the Act to foster the development of manpower training in order to promote workforce skills development and recognition. It replaces the title of the Act and amends its purpose statement accordingly, and establishes a workforce skills development and recognition framework. This framework allows the Minister of Employment and Social Solidarity to issue certificates certifying that their holders have mastered the skills required for a trade as set out in an approved occupational standard.

The bill also gives the Commission des partenaires du marché du travail the power to determine, by regulation, the fees charged for issuing those certificates. It further gives the Commission the power to establish workplace skills development strategies under the framework. The bill adjusts the role played by the sector-based manpower committees, now called sectoral workforce committees, to reflect these changes and provides that they are to exercise their mandate in keeping with the sectoral intervention policy framed by the Commission and submitted to the Minister for approval.

In addition, the bill proposes that payments made to or expenditures incurred with a recognized training mutual be recognized as eligible expenditures incurred for the benefit of personnel, on conditions to be set by a regulation of the Commission, in replacement of payments made to a recognized body for the implementation of an accredited training plan.

The bill changes the composition of the Québec manpower training fund known as the Fonds national de formation de la main-d'œuvre and further specifies what the monies may be used for.

The bill allows the Minister to delegate certain functions to the Commission by agreement. To that end, the bill gives the Commission the general power to make agreements and to appear before the courts as plaintiff or defendant, and grants members of the Commission immunity for acts in good faith in the exercise of their functions.

The bill also amends the operating rules of the department and outlines administrative procedures that are to apply to services-sharing agreements between public bodies.

Lastly, the bill contains consequential amendments and technical as well as transitional provisions.

“WORKFORCE SKILLS DEVELOPMENT AND RECOGNITION FRAMEWORK

“25.1. The purpose of the workforce skills development and recognition framework is to promote the development of various training modes so that workers may acquire and master skills in the workplace and have those skills recognized, with a view to increasing access to trades and enhancing the transferability of learning.

In this chapter, “trade” includes a job function.

“25.2. An occupational standard is the benchmark for the development of training modes and for skills acquisition, mastery and recognition in the workplace under the framework.

“25.3. An occupational standard describes a trade and is broken down into as many skills as are required for autonomous practice and mastery of the trade.

“25.4. An occupational standard is developed by a sectoral workforce committee. It must meet a labour market need and enjoy consensus in the sector concerned. An occupational standard may exceptionally be developed by another organization recognized by the Commission for that purpose.

If compliant with the conditions set in this Act and the formalities determined by the Minister, the occupational standard is approved by the Minister, on the Commission's recommendation. As well, on the Commission's recommendation, an occupational standard that no longer meets labour market needs may be disallowed by the Minister.

“25.5. The Minister shall make public by any appropriate means a notice that an occupational standard has been approved or that an approved occupational standard has been amended or disallowed.

“25.6. For the purposes of the framework, the Commission may establish workplace skills development strategies that are to be proposed to employers as training modes for one or more occupational standards and are aimed at enabling workers to master the trade described by an occupational standard.

A sectoral workforce committee or an employer may participate in the development of such strategies, to the extent agreed with the Commission.

Workplace skills development strategies may, in particular,

(1) determine the conditions for worker participation in any action or activity designed to allow workers to acquire or master the skills described in an occupational standard;

(2) determine the details and nature of such an action or activity;

(3) determine the conditions to be met and the qualifications and aptitudes required to act as a supervising journeyworker, tutor, coach or apprenticeship supervisor or to otherwise supervise an apprentice as a part of such strategies;

(4) determine the conditions for employer participation;

(5) determine the requirements for recognition of the skills acquired or mastered; and

(6) determine any other measure considered necessary to implement the strategies or facilitate their application.

“25.7. On application, the Minister issues an occupational qualification certificate to any person who meets one of the following conditions regarding a trade described in an occupational standard:

(1) the person has met the skills recognition requirements determined for a workplace skills development strategy established under the framework; or

(2) the person exercises or has exercised the trade and an organization or sectoral workforce committee recognized by the Commission for the trade confirms that the person has met the skills recognition requirements that a person must meet in order to demonstrate mastery of all the skills described in the occupational standard.

On application, the Minister issues a competency certificate to a person who, in one of the situations described in the first paragraph, demonstrates mastery of one or more of the skills described in an occupational standard.

If an organization or sectoral workforce committee recognized as specified in subparagraph 2 of the first paragraph charges fees to persons who wish to be recognized for mastery of all or some of the skills described in an occupational standard, the fees must comply with the limits agreed with the Commission, which must be brought to the attention of the Minister. Not later than 1 April 2011 and every three years after that date, the Commission must report to the Minister on the carrying out of this paragraph as regards the fees charged.

The Commission may, by regulation, set the fees payable for the issue of an occupational qualification certificate or a competency certificate under this section. Such a regulation must be submitted to the Government for approval.”
